"Of course, I will enlist if the country needs me; but I won't volunteer—I have a wife to provide for."

He was probably right; but look; you don't have to go to war to put your wife in danger. You would be no deader in battle from a bullet than at home from pneumonia.

In fact, your wife would be better off if you died as a soldier, as the expense of your sickness and burial would be saved her.

Obligation to your wife during war is no greater than during peace—it only seems so.

The wife of a dead citizen has the same needs as the soldier's widow.

Peace has its heroes.
